Collaborative Practice San Diego announces new Board of Directors

The Collaborative Practice San Diego association for professionals in the divorce and collaborative divorce fields has a new Board of Directors taking the helm with the new year.

Outgoing president Myra Chack Fleischer said the professional group is in good hands with the incoming Board.

"I have worked alongside these professionals, some for many years. They are all professional, provide superior services to their clients and the community and are dedicated to helping Collaborative Practice San Diego get even better," Ms. Fleischer said.

The Collaborative Practice San Diego association is made up of professionals who work in the family law fields. Members are lawyers, accountants and financial advisers, therapists and counselors. Ms. Fleischer said all have the same goal in mind, to make the divorce process as peaceful and equitable as possible and certainly keep the best interests of any children foremost.

As the immediate past president, Ms. Fleischer will be there to advise the new President and Board and lend her experiences to matters as needed.

The new board members are:
